this volume investigates written communication before and after the introduction of printing in England the global history of text based communication constitutes a particularly exciting facet of material culture given the myriad ways in which its production transmission and consumption has been and continues to be accomplished across cultural and political boundaries however a critical engagement with script and print outside the western world has remained relatively limited to summaries and generalisations despite a burgeoning interest in the interrelated areas of printing publishing design and type histories the time is long overdue for these narratives relating to the material production of text to expand and address the rich variation and particularity of global practices covering a variety of scripts and linguistic contexts this volume explores the plurality of historical and contemporary engagements with and interpretations of the printed and written word in various artefacts printing technologies and writing systems part of the printing history and culture series by the centre for printing history and culture this book presents critical perspectives and fresh approaches toward the study of the visual and material aspects of print in diverse linguistic environments whether handwritten lithographed typographically printed or digitally manifested provided by publisher early modern books were not stable or settled outputs of the press but dynamic shape changers subject to reworking re presentation revision and reinterpretation their history is often the history of multiple sometimes competing agencies as their texts were re packaged redirected and transformed in ways that their original authors might hardly recognize processes of editing revision redaction selection abridgement glossing disputation translation and posthumous publication resulted in a textual elasticity and mobility that could dissolve distinctions between text and paratexts textuality and intertextuality manuscript and print author and reader or editor such that title and author s name are no longer sufficient pointers to a book s identity or contents this collection brings together original essays by an international team of eminent scholars in the field of book history that explore these various kinds of textual inconstancy and variability the essays are alive to the impact of commercial and technological aspects of book production and distribution discussing for example the career of the pre eminent bookseller john nourse the market appeal of abridgements and the financial incentives to posthumous publication but their interest is also in the many additional forms of agency that shaped texts and their meanings as books were repurposed to articulate and respond to a variety of cultural and individual needs they engage with early modern religious political philosophical and scholarly trends and debates as they discuss a wide range of genres and kinds of publication including fictional and non fictional prose verse miscellanies abridgements sermons religious controversy and of authors including lucy hutchinson richard baxter john dryden thomas burnet john tillotson henry maundrell jonathan swift samuel richardson john wesley and samuel taylor coleridge the result is a
